AFTER THE SHOW

CONSIDER TAKING THE NEXT STEP

On the next three pages, you'll find questions you can ask your guests to reflect on what you saw, heard, learned, and thought during the show. You'll also find activities designed to get you thinking about reimagining high school in your community and sharing your thoughts via social media.

Depending on how large your group is, you may want to consider dividing your guests into groups of 5-7.

QUESTIONS

QUESTION 1.

What did you love about your high school experience? What would you have changed?

QUESTION 2.

How might schools use spaces inside and beyond the school to enhance learning?

QUESTION 3.

What skills will students need in the next 10-20 years to be prepared for college, career and life? How can high schools do better to ensure today's students obtain those skills?

QUESTION 4.

What's one thing you can do this week to encourage more people in your community to come together and support students to get the education they deserve?

ACTIVITIES

ACTIVITY 1.

On a piece of paper, draw what you wish the classroom of the future would look like.

Things to think about: Does it have walls? Would you have textbooks, or something more experiential? Where would it be? Who would teach?

ACTIVITY 2.

Careers of the future may look very different from careers of today. Think about two of your passions and interests.

Now, think of a way to combine those into a job (even if it doesn't exist yet!). Take 3 minutes and draw what that looks like on a sheet of paper.

ACTIVITY 3.

High school should prepare youth for success in the 21st century. Which three experiences, abilities, or qualities should every student leave high school with?

ACTIVITY 4.

Education policymakers differ from community to community. List 1-3 people who influence high school education decisions in your area.

If they asked you for your advice on how to improve high school education, what would you say?

COME TOGETHER & SHARE

Think about your aspirations for your local high school and how to achieve them. Share your ideas with the group, and then use markers to draw your ideas onto a large piece of paper, which reads:

“ _____, We Have Your Back.”

The larger the paper and thicker the marker the better. However, any size paper and writing utensil will do. The blank space could be filled by a specific school, city or district (e.g. “Springfield Public High Schools, We Have Your Back” or “Central High School, We Have Your Back.”)

Once you have drawn ideas down on paper take a group photo with the banner and share it with XQ via social media. Don't forget to use the hashtags #XQLive and tag @xqamerica in your post.

ABOUT XQ

XQ inspires communities to help reshape high school so it prepares every student for success in college, career and life. XQ: The Super School Project launched in September 2015 as an open call to rethink and design the American high school. More than 10,000 students, educators, parents and community leaders from all 50 states and representing nearly 4,000 communities answered this call by proposing innovative, student-centered models for 21st century learning. Today, these innovators and supporters are a community of 78,000 strong and growing. To date, XQ has pledged $115 million to a growing number of the most promising ideas, actively supporting these teams on their journeys to become Super Schools.
